

Jeffrey Teitelbaum

Leadership in Education Consultant

Jeffrey is an education leader with over 30 years in the Vermont school system. During his 22 years as a school principal, he has used the coach approach to increase collaboration and empower leadership in schools, for all educators regardless of title or tenure. During his leadership, his schools were known for their overwhelming community support, high educational achievement, and warm atmosphere. His school was one of only two Franklin County schools identified as making adequate yearly progress as defined under the No Child Left Behind Law. Jeffrey championed the development of a shared leadership model in his supervisory union that has led to a more responsive culture in the schools.

Newly retired, Jeffrey is continuing to engage with education leaders to help them develop their own leadership styles and to empower educational teams. He is adept at using his experiences to help create high performing schools with positive school and community climates.

Jeffrey holds a Bachelors degree from the University of Maryland, and a Masters of Education from George Washington University. He also trained in Conflict Mediation at Woodbury College. In 1995, he was honored with the National Distinguished Principal Award. Jeff also holds a professional certificate in Business Coaching for Leaders and Managers from the Coaching Center of Vermont.
